WINEMAKING

Made with our own grapes grown in a ravine in the Andean foothills of the Cachapoal Valley. The grapes are hand-harvested into 12-kg boxes. Then, following cluster selection, they are destemmed and fall directly into the stainless steel tank without the use of pumps. A 3-day pre-fermentative maceration is followed by alcoholic fermentation for 10 days at a temperature of between 18°C and 20°C. 90% of the wine remains in stainless steel for the malolactic fermentation, while the other 10% is racked into third-use French oak barrels. The wine is aged for at least 6 months and then bottle-aged for a further 6 months prior to release.

Mosaiko is a blend from our blocks of Cabernet Sauvignon, with each contributing different characteristics to achieve a youthful wine that is characteristic of the area.

TASTING NOTES

Violet-ruby color. The nose reveals fresh red and black fruit aromas like cherries, plums and fruits of the forest, along with a floral hint. In the mouth, this wine is juicy with smooth tannins and medium body. The finish is well-balanced and presents notes of sweet red fruit. This wine is very approachable and a great option for sharing.
